North Carolina Biotechnology Center ImPACT Intern:

The Intern will work with the Business and Technology Development group at the North Carolina Biotechnology Center (NCBC) providing support to NCBC’s loan program for start-up life science companies. In this role, the intern will review loan applications, performing due diligence on company technology, development, commercialization, competition, financing and intellectual property. The intern will be responsible for synthesizing the collected data to draft loan recommendations for internal review and feedback. To complete due diligence, the intern will use library, patent and other search tools. Interns will learn the basics of due diligence of a technology and company for the purpose of determining future investment. Approved NCBC loans support the funding of emerging life sciences companies across North Carolina.
